

The Exegetical Labors of the Reverend Matthew Poole: Volume 8b: Deuteronomy 19-34

Although the Book of Deuteronomy has received considerable scholarly attention, it is all too frequently neglected by the common Christian. This ought not to be. Deuteronomy is much more than a mere repetition of laws; it is full of the covenant of grace, of the Gospel of Jesus Christ, and of the way of justification by His blood and sanctification through His Word and Spirit. This is Scripture, given by inspiration of God, and profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness: that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works (2 Timothy 3:16, 17). Let every word studied, contemplated, believed, cherished, and applied. [Y]ou will find in Pooles Synopsis a marvellous collection of all the wisdom ... of the critics.... Query--a query for which I will not demand an answer--has one of you ever beaten the dust from the venerable copy of Poole which loads our library shelves? Yet as Poole spent no less than ten years in compiling it, it should be worthy of your frequent notice.... Matthew Poole also wrote Annotations upon the Word of God, in English, which are mentioned by Matthew Henry ... and he not only highly praises them, but declares that he has in his own work all along been brief upon that which Mr. Poole has more largely discussed, and has industriously declined what is to be found there.... On the whole, if I must have only one commentary, and had read Matthew Henry as I have, I do not know but what I should choose Poole. He is a very prudent and judicious commentator...
