

Were Off to Pray

A young boy prepares to pray with his family before he hears some familiar voices at the door. His friends have arrived and want to play. He must decide to pray or to play in this warm story that sees him enjoy an afternoon in the sun and please his parents and Creator. A simple yet captivating story that pits that pull of playtime against the daily requirement to pray in Muslim life. Sana Munshey, mother of four, is currently residing in Qatar, but home is still Ann Arbor, Michigan. Her inspiration for writing came from her children, whom she homeschools.
