

Jack London (Classic Storytellers)

Jack London grew up poor, abandoned by his father even before he was born. He was raised by a disabled Civil War veteran who married his mother, a woman with violent and unpredictable mood swings. At 14, he dropped out of school to support the family, working in factories and on ships. Over the course of his brief lifetime, he authored more than four dozen novels such as Call of the Wild and even more short stories. He became a best-selling author in the United States. Today he is one of the most widely read writers of all time. Jack London wrote about the life and adventures he lived.
