

Miranda and Starlight (The Starlight Books, 1)

Remember how books by Marguerite Henry, Mary Ohara and Walter Farley thrilled us? Weaving its story into the fabric of modern day western America, this new contemporary series does the same for today's youth. Janet Muirhead Hill has created an ongoing saga involving an orphaned girl with a burning desire for a horse of her own. In this award-winning first volume, Miranda meets the horse of her dreams, Starlight. She yearns to own him so they can always be together. Through the disastrous results of her attempt to ride him, Miranda learns lessons in honesty, courage and self integrity. Now in its second printing, Miranda and Starlight entertains and encourages; thrills and edifies readers of all ages. These books have a positive impact, cultivating a love for reading and instilling important ideals.

Although set in the world of horse lore, Miranda and Starlight was touted by Writers Notes Awards panelists as more than a mere horse story. It is a journey of courage and consequences. The reviewer added, My own children will read this story. Besides earning the Notable award, this book and its sequel Starlight's Courage, have won the favor of a film producer and a feature film is currently in development. To the joy of young readers, Starlight Shines for Miranda, which is book five of the series, was awarded Young Adult Best Books 2004 winner by USA Book News.
